

A Flower Friend

This story is about the friendship between a little girl and a flower. As the summer days pass, their friendship deepens. The flower tells the girl about the wonders of the earth and the girl excitedly goes to see her friend every day. A long time ago while I was browsing books at a metaphysical bookstore in New York City, I read that flowers in his garden told Einstein the theory of relativity. I thought if the flowers can tell the theory of relativity to Einstein, they certainly can have a conversation with a little girl. As I searched the internet for any validity for this memory, I found the following quotation in Dusty Bunkers book called Dream Cycles: Einstein said to Charles Hapgood, You know Charlie, if I told the world how I got my theory of relativity, they would lock me up. He went on, I was sitting in my garden, and my flowers told me.
