

Motherhood...What You Dont Know!

Babies having babies has become a nationwide epidemic. Motherhood is a lifetime commitment and a child 13 or 14 years of age is incapable of making such a commitment. Although the rate of pregnancies for teens has fallen, the proportion of pregnancies outside of marriage in the teen years is up to about 79 percent for ages 15 to 19 (www.kidsource.com). Girls today seem to think that having a baby is a rite of passage into womanhood. However, they have no idea of the major responsibility that comes with having a baby. This book is a journey through Motherhood. The babies may be cute, and who can resist the smell of Johnson & Johnsons baby lotion? But, when your belly is being stretched to the limits, you have gained 50 lbs, and the babys daddy is long gone and youre up at three oclock in the morning feeding the baby, the truth comes out. The enclosed pages are just a sample of what teen mothers go through. Its not pretty. Growing up without a father is hard for children, but its particularly hard for girls who want to be a daddys girl. Girls that didnt have that father/daughter bond growing up, tend to seek out older males to fill the void. Essentially, they end up searching for love in all the wrong places, thinking that having a baby will keep the babys father in their lives, when in fact, the quickest way to end a relationship is to get pregnant.
